

Now, everyone wants 3 W to communicate!
But, like once, I think we need at least 5 and it is still not enough.

I am an italian polite boy, with a good culture due to classical studies and a course in computer science engineering.
I am also very curious and this drives me to study every kind of topic.

I would like to work for a company not too big, formed of people, not numbers, a dynamic company which makes me work and grow. I can work alone, but I can also manage and organize groups of people.

I have chosen not to specialize but rather than to maintain my skills as wide as possible even though than optimal level. I can develop software; project electronic circuits, informatics systems, web sites; teach instruction course.

I like to analyse computer related problems but not only (a problem and propose solutions; related to computers but not only).
I love teaching and I am good at it!
I like writing software using one of the many languages I know and maybe the firmware for any microcontroller.

I do not like repetitive and boring jobs. I do not like selling things, wasting my time in useless things.
Write too much!

By doing an intellectual job I do not usually follow a fixed schedule but when needed I work till late in the evenings and on weekends.

In recent years, business trips have become more frequent but also more stressful and demanding from both an economical and temporal point of view.
I prefer to work 8 hours quietly at home rather than in an office two hours from home.

I spent most of my life between Feltre and Pedavena, two neighboring municipalities in the province of Belluno.
I studied some years in Bologna and I moved for work several months in Rome and in Lanciano (CH).

I divide my life traveling between Feltre and a small town just outside Budapest where my partner lives.

Online! In the last few years I have worked almost exclusively at distance, using remote control softwares and communicating via voip and email. I prefer not to move too much, and I like doing it by public transport, so I would like a job not too far from home.

You can do whatever you want in this C.V. but do not alter it and do not sell my email to spammers, thank you!

I have been working in the field for over 20 years, primarily as a freelance. I have extensive experience as a systems analyst, software and firmware developer.
In parallel I also worked in different field as a clerk or a consultant as a teacher, in a pizzeria restaurant, as a graphic, etc.
I like the old italian adage/proverb: learn the art and put it aside.

I speak Italian. I know quite well English and French, I read them fluently and speak decently. I understand Spanish, thanks to its proximity to Latin and to the Venetian dialect.

I am currently studying Hungarian with profit. Recently I got the ECL B2 grade.
The best language I know is anyway, the language of computers!

I read many C.V. and I have always found them unattractive: simple lists of facts and boastings.

I have tried to do something new, first of all interesting for me.
The information you cannot find here is on my website.

One of the paradigms of our society is the continuous improvement, everything changes for the better, hopefully!
After so many years investing in myself now I'm trying to harvest, to use my experience and skills.
